

Thurs., Oct. 8, 2010

Dear Parent / Guardian,

The Director's Cut Workshops is Canada's leading Digital Media Literacy workshop.

The CLAYMATION workshop, will provide your child with the opportunity to produce, direct and act in their own media project to help support new learning initiatives and provincial curriculum objectives.

During the full day workshop on Mon., Nov. 1, 2010 your child will be introduced to the latest in digital technology by Director's Cut technology facilitators and film makers.

At The Director's Cut, what you think is what you get! In this one of a kind workshop, clay is the main ingredient for fun! Students construct their own characters and scenes and then using stop motion technology and cutting edge video cameras, lap top computers, expert instruction and their imagination, they will bring things to life in their very own Hollywood blockbuster stop motion film! They also get to add sound effects, voice overs, special effects, transitions and titles to make their film a shoe in for an Academy Award!

Participants will receive their own copy on DVD and have the opportunity for their film to be screened at a Film Festival at Cineplex throughout Alberta and Ontario.

The workshop promotes and develops collaborative technology skills under the provincial curriculum which mandates teachers to develop appropriate media literacy skills through the use of technology.

The cost for the technology workshop is $12.00 per participant and covers all materials, instruction, and final product. Please return form and money no later than Fri., Oct. 22, 2010. The cost of this workshop has been reduced by $5 due to proceeds from the magazine fund-raiser and School Council.

Thank you and we look forward to seeing where your child's imagination will take them!
